THE DAILY CLARION

DECISIONS OF THE HIGH COURT

JANUARY TERM, 1867.

ERRORS AND APPEALS.

MeIntyre & Dillard.)

J. P. Harris. Mr. Justice Harris delivered the Opinion of the Court.

relation of the parties after the fall of New Orleans, it is enough to say that it by no means appears b anything contained in this bill, that such a relation ever subsisted between them, as would re-der intercourse and trade between them unlawful, it is further contended that the purchase of the bills single by the complainant was fraudglent, and therefore void. The fact relied on to establish this proposition and 1st, the inconsistent and contradictory statements of the bill, and 2d, the time when the purchase was made.

The bill in one place alleges that Rugeby & chants, Agents for Co. claimed to be the owners of the bills single EVANS CELEBRATED IMPORTED ALE and PORTER, their own right, and that complainant bught them without any notice that Jones had any right to them whatever; and in another place that they were induced to pur-chase them by the assurance of Jones that Rureby & Co. had authority to receive Coner to or any other kind of money for them, at their discretion. These statements are aparently contradictory, but it is not necessari any evidence of fraud that a party in his dending, puts his case upon different and inn-istent grounds. It must be either a moral fraud or a fraud in law. If the former then it would be only evidence of intention, to be considered by the court with other proofs, upon final hearing. It the latter, it must be so by virtue of some rule of law, that such a famit in pleading is ipse facts a fact in law, for which the case of the guisty party must be di missed from the court. In fact it is neither s legal nor a moral fraud, and is perhaps only important for its violation of the rules of good pleading. At law, a party may, without animadversion, state his case in many different and seemingly repugnant forms, by resorting to different counts. But such a mode of pleaddoes not accord with the plain and simple a that obtain in courts of equity. Had the ction to the contradictory statements of this bill, been taken by a special demurrer, the court would no doubt have required the complainant to amend, and to elect on which position he would choose to stand. But the Lis not so fatally objectionable on that acount, as to be tiable to dismissal on a general demurrer, on the ground of fraud.

But it is said that the complanant did not purchase the bills single until after the fall of of New Orleans, and this is relied on - proof of the fraud. Unless the purchase, under such circumstances was one of such a character as the law adjudges to be fraudlent, without reference to the motive and intention of the parties, it cannot be pronounced a fraud on demurrer to the bill. But of itself, it would not be evidence of fraud at all. If Rugeby & Co. then had authority to sell, and complainant bought in good faita, all which is averred in the bill, and admitted by the demurrer, it is difficult to see how traud is to be predicated of the transaction. If the agents of Mr. Jones acted unwisely or fathlessly, that would not affect the title of complainant coless he was guilty of some fraudulent conduct himself. this we are asked to pre-une, in opposition to the averments of the bill, which in this proceeding are to be taken as true, It is also insisted, and this seems to be the main point in the case, that the sale of these ils single was void both by the laws of the United States, and of the State of Louisiana. We have already decided in the case of Green vs. Sizer, at the present term that are of Mississippi, in the year 1862, where the consideration was paid in treasury notes of the Confederate States, was not in violation of any law or policy of the United States or of this We passed over the enquiry whether the original issuence of these treasury notes by the Con ederate States, could be considered as contravention of any law or policy of the nited states, as a question not necessary to e decided, and rested our conclusion, mainly on the well established principle expressly commended by the Supreme Court of the Uni ted States in the case of Armstrong vs. Toles, and by all approved writers on the subject, that where the contract does not grow imme-diately out of the original illegal act, but is unconnected with it, and is founded on a new consideration, such contract is not invalid, but will be enforced by the courts, notwithstanding the is-unnee of the treasury no es might have been wholly unlawful. We see no reason to be dissatisfied with that decision, and it disposes of a large portion of the argument of the appetice in this case, leaving only so far as this point is concerned the question whether the peculiar facts of this case exempt it from = operation of the rule there adopted. The sale of these bills single took place in the of New Orleans, on the third day o May, 2, which, he bill states, was six days after occupation of the city by the Federal troops and hen eit is in-isted that the contract was

We have already shown in the case of Hill vs. Baylan at the present term, that, according to the repeated decisions of the Supr me Court of the United State-, during the continthe Conjederate States, or at least so much of it as lay on the South of the line of military empation by the forces of the United States as enemy's territory, and that the constitu-States were suspended therein. In the prize cases, Judge Grier states the proposition contended for by one of the parties, to be "That the constitution and laws of the United States." are still operative over persons in all the States for punishment as well as protection," and he ceds to refute this pretension, in language that has been here ofore quoted by this c urt, and arrives at the conclusion, that all persons residing within the states declared by the President to be in a State of insurrection, are enemies of the United States not entitled to invoke the protection of its constitution and laws; and that all property belonging to rach persons captured on the high seas, is justify in the condemnation as one my's property. ble to condemnation as enemy's property And in the case of Mrs. Alexander, it is adjudged that this enemy relation must cont nue until, by the action of the Legislature and the executive, or otherwise, it becomes "thorough-ly and permanently changed." In the latter case it was further held that the occupation of the country by Banks and his army, for a eriod of six weeks, was "too limited, too ief, too imperf et and too precarious," to change, even while it lasted the enemy relation previously created for the country and its mhabitants; and that Mrs. Alexander, a loyal pathy or participation in the rebellion, had, by reason of her more residence in this enemy territory," fortelted the right guaranteed to every "citizen" by the constitution and laws of the United States, to sue in the Federal courts. It being thus settled by the highest judicial tribunal, that the constitution and laws of the United States were not operative in the Confederate States, either for punishment or protection, and that loyal citizens of the United States, residing within the limits of the Confederate States were not bound in their individual transactions, to respect the laws or policy of a government, that thus spurned the allegiance of those who had kept their loyalty The United States had no law or policy in force in the Confederate States during the wa. They had been expelled by force and were kept out by the same reans; and the people were subjected to new laws and new poney. to which they had no option but to submit The use of Confederate money became an ab-olute necessity of their condition, for without it they could neither live in the Confederacy, nor make their e-cape from it. There were no other mains of procuring food and clothing, and to hold that in giving or receiving it, the people in their then situation, were gullty of an offence against the paramount law
